“About nine pounds a week, it was. And I thought I was rich. A bit for mam and the rest for me. If I remember rightly, it was four pounds to mam and the rest for me, or five pounds to mam and the rest for me. It was like that, I worked there for about a year and a half. And Ferodo, a brand new factory, just opened, and they were starting to take on kids, young kids. Before, when it first opened, they were taking older people. But they started taking on kids, oh, we were still kids at sixteen. And I went there to work and I got twenty pounds a week.”
